PEEKSKILL

THE REV. ANGELO OSTRANDER TO LEAVE ST. PAUL'S CHURCH. The Rev. Angelo Ostrander will to-day occupy the pulpit of St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church for the last time at its pastor. Mr. Ostrander has been pastor of the church for five years, and leaves because of the time limit and not through any desire of his own or wish of his congregation. Mr. Ostrander is the first Methodist minister to serve a five years' pastorate at any of the Peekskill Methodist churches, or at any Methodist church in the neighborhood. He will preach this morning on the theme "The History and Work of St. Paul's Church for the Last Five Years." In the evening he will preach a special sermon to the members of Cortlandt Hook and Ladder Co., No. 1, Peekskill's banner fire company, of which he is an honorary member. His theme will be "True Manhood." The Local option will be tested at the polls on Tuesday and a number of Peekskill clergymen will preach on the subject this morning. The Rev. Alfred Coom's theme will be "The Raines Bill." The Rev. J. Ritchie Smith will preach on "The New Aspect of the Temperance Question."

The streets of Peekskill were crowded yesterday with politicians talking over the election. Much excitement prevails and also much drunkenness. For fear that Peekskill will go dry on Tuesday, the drinkers are having their fill now. The present indications are that the entire Republican ticket of thirty-five town officials will be elected. There are four tickets in the field: Republican, Democratic, Prohibition and Independent, and the fight is a bitter one.

YONKERS.

Four years ago the Warburton Avenue Baptist Four years ago the Warburton Avenue Baptist Church began to cultivate the musical talent of the congregation. The plan adopted was to have a chorus to sing hymns, first of a simple sort, and aim to advance from that to higher grade. As the plan has been carried out, congregational singing has steadily improved. The chorus soon gathered a double superior of children as its centre and great steadily improved. The chorus soon garacters a double quartet of children as its centre, and great satisfaction has been given. This spring a quartet of still more musical culture will be engaged, and around them the chorus will be gathered, and a still

SING SING.

In compliance with Section 16 of the act in relation to the traffic in liquors, otherwise known as the Raines Excise law, every town in Westchester County will vote on Tuesday for or against the following questions: First, shall saloon licenses be granted or liquor sold to be drunk on the prem ises; second, shall storekeepers' licenses be granted or liquor sold, not to be drunk on the premises; third, shall druggists' licenses be granted or liquor third, shall druggists' licenses be granted or liquor sold only on physicians' prescriptions; fourth, shall hotelkeepers' licenses be granted or liquor sold in a hotel? As the town elections come so soon after the bill became a law few towns were prepared through their officers to pass upon the question, and its submission at the polls on Tuesday was a thing entirely unexpected. The law, however, expressly stipulates that the local option question shall be submitted at the first election following the passage of the act, so there has been a general thurrying around on the part of town officers, and the question will be duly submitted throughout the county.

THE NEW FIELD OPENED BY EDISON.

HOW THE INVENTOR SOLVED THE VACUUM PROBLEM-PRODUCTION AND POWERS OF THE FLUOROSCOPE.

Thomas A. Edison has apparently brought his processes for the development of the results of the X rays to a point of practical perfection. By his discovery of the fluorescent properties of the tungstate of calcium and its remarkable sensitiveness to the X rays, he has practically opened a new field to the experimenter. The old process of photo-graphing is entirely dispensed with, and the ex-perimenter now sees with the naked eye, instan-taneously, the objects sought to be investigated. Mr. Edison's great trouble for a long time was in which gave excellent results at first, in a very few minutes' use weakened and showed the violet cathode rays, thus indicating a low vacuum that was practically useless for the production of the X particular phase of the problem wowled him and caused him more hard thinking and study than all the other points that came under his study. At last a bright ilea came to him. As he said, "I believe that that beggar Röntgen didn't tell all that he knew." Accordingly, after a good deal of study, Mr. Edison struck on the idea that the vacuum should not be produced and the tube sealed up and then left to its own fate, but that the proper procedure was to have the vacuum apparatus working constantly, so as to keep the vacuum, when once produced, constant. This proved to be the solution that in constant use in all the electric lamp works, may prove interesting. It consists, in non-technical terms, of an upright tube of glass about three feet in length and of small diameter. To the top of this is attached the tube or lamp in which it is lesired to produce the vacuum, the connection be ng made by a rubber ring. Into the side of this connected at the top with a reservoir of mercury. This is the entire apparatus in its essential parts. air to be exhausted, a stop cock is opened in the side tube, and a stream of mercury runs down and main tube is nicely regulated, so as to be a triffe mercury. As the mercury drops into the main tube in front of it a little air, exhausted from the upper part of the tube. As the vacuum is formed, the mercury in the lower part of the main tube stands in a supported column, and the height of this column indicates the degree of vacuum that has been pro-The apparatus that Mr. Edison has found mos

These latter are connected with the vacuum pump just described, which for conventence is placed on a plank at the rear of the fers practically no resistance to the passage of the X rays. So much for the productive part. The remainder is the optical part of the apparatus, and this is the simplest possible. Readers of The Tribune will remember the old stereoscopic instruments which fitted closely to the eye and contained two lenses so arranged that their focus was identical. Now, imagine the outer case of this stereoscope to be extended for six or eight inches and there ending in an oblong parallelogram, perhaps 5x9 in size. Take out the lenses entirely and cover the large open end with a piece of cardboard or cloth on which the minute crystals of tungstate of calcium have been strewn and held in position by a film of collodion. Then one has the Edison "Fluoroscope," and this is all that there is to it. In use this is simply applied to the eyes so that the outer light is excluded, and when placed anywhere in the field that is permeated by the X rays, the film of tungstate of calcium crystals at once glows with a wonderful fluorescence. fers practically no resistance to the passage of the film of tungstate of calcium crystals at once glows with a wonderful fluorescence.

The application is evident. Place the hand or the arm or the leg of a man or any other object that it is desired to examine on top of the box, and let the current be turned on. With the fluoroscope the investigator sees pictured before him with startling distinctness the bones of the hand or arm, as the case may be. The flesh neems entirely to disappear under the X rays, and only the bones that are imperviouus to them tast their shadows on the film.

A COMPANY TO START A POPULIST COLONY II

Thaddeus B. Wakeman, who on Friday night made a bitter attack on the Republican party, Dr. Parkhurst, Tammany Hall, and everything and everybody opposed to Populism, yesterday an-nounced that he was one of the promoters of a company which has acquired a tract of 6,500 acres in Northern California which the company proposes to make an Eden for Populists with the help of the money and brawn of settlers from New-England

According to Mr. Wakeman, the advance guard of one colony has already settled on the land, which was formerly owned and farmed by Colonel C. B. Ashurst. This colony is known as the Ashurst Colony. Mr. Wakeman said that twenty settlers were now building their homes there, and that the company had over one hundred applicants for allotment. It is proposed to make the colony model for others. A settler can buy from ten to he purchases the settler is obliged to buy one share in the general stock of the company. He also gets an acre lot in the village, in which all the colonists will live. The money derived from the sale of the
